

Consult 4 Kids publishes “Best Practices” each month to share what we’ve learned about high-quality, youth-centered programs.

Assess the effectiveness of each transition, making alterations when necessary

Be sure to have the supplies that students will need to complete homework.

Begin with a calendar, your program goals, and then create your schedule.

Behave in a respectful and responsible manner at all times. You are always a role model for youth.

Being good at helping youth with homework is based on remembering that youth, not you, “own” the homework and completing it is a job that falls to them.

Being intentional about Opening can make a huge difference in your program.
