

Consult 4 Kids publishes “Best Practices” each month to share what we’ve learned about high-quality, youth-centered programs.

Each day you get off to the “right start” by planning each Opening carefully.

Celebrate a successful application of each protocol. This is how you will solidify a 'habit”

Celebrate a successful transition-this is how you will solidify a 'habit”

Check in with youth and staff often about their sense of emotional safety in Choice is an essential part of ownership and buy-in. Too often we think that the choice is to do something or not to do something. In reality, choice can also be about when you do something, where you do something, how you do something, and with whom you work. These choices can be accommodated in most any environment and schedule.

Circulate, offer support where needed, remembering to focus on asking questions.